Drunk driving enforcement to increase during July 4 holiday

By RICHARD LEGGITT
Hill Country News

Cedar Park police will be increasing patrols on major roadways for DWI enforcement this week.

The Cedar Park Police Department is continuing its successful Selective Traffic Enforcement Program (STEP) this week through July 4th in an effort to discourage drunk driving and make local roads and highways safer.

"Impaired driving, whether due to alcohol, illegal drugs or prescription medication, has the potential to forever damage and end lives - often those of innocent victims," said Cedar Park Police Chief Sean Mannix. "We all have a responsibility when we get behind the wheel to be alert and present and to prioritize the safety of ourselves and those around us. If people choose not to do that this Fourth of July, we will be there to enforce the consequences."

Police Media and Communications Specialist Tara Long said until Wednesday, July 5, the Cedar Park Police Department will increase patrol presence on local roadways to discourage and monitor impaired driving violations as part of the ongoing regional STEP Initiative.

"We had two STEP DWI arrests over Memorial Day," Long said. "There were other DWI arrests made during that period, just not by patrol units working the STEP program. Last year, we made 13 STEP DWI arrests over the July 4th initiative."

Challengers race to fill Carter's seat in Congress

By RICHARD LEGGITT
Hill Country News

Three substantive Democrat candidates are already campaigning hard for the 31st District Congressional seat held by longtime Republican incumbent John Rice Carter.

But their chances of success in next year's elections, as well as Carter's, may hinge on whether a war heroine, author or champion of women's equality gets into the race.

Christine Eady Mann, a Cedar Park family physician; Mike Clark, a geospatial engineer from Georgetown; and Kent Lester, a former U.S. Army officer and former educator who lives in Cedar Park; all have set their sights on winning the March 6, 2018 Democratic primary for the right to oppose Carter in next year's general election.

Local Democrat activists are excited about the current candidates and their chances of upsetting Representative Carter, a Round Rock resident and former Williamson County judge, who has been in Congress for 14 years. But they are also intrigued about the possibility that decorated war veteran and women's champion Mary Jennings Hegar may enter the Democrat primary.

Hegar, who lives in Austin, was a pilot on an Air National Guard medevac helicopter that was shot down in Afghanistan in 2009. Despite being wounded, she used her weapon to furiously fight off a group of enemy attackers and save the lives of her patients and crew. She was awarded a number of medals for her actions, including the Distinguished Flying Cross, a medal that has only been awarded to six women, including Amelia Earhart.

Returning home after three tours of duty, Hegar

Leander getting set for Liberty Fest

BYOB no longer allowed under new rule

By RICHARD LEGGITT
Hill Country News

Leander's annual Liberty Fest is expecting more than 12,000 people at its Independence Day celebration featuring fireworks, food and music. City officials want to make sure participants enjoy themselves while observing new rules and safety procedures.

According to Mike Neu, Leander's public information officer, this year alcoholic beverages purchased outside of the Liberty Fest site will not be allowed and will be screened at the entrance gates. However, alcoholic beverages will be available on site for purchase from licensed vendors.

Neu said bags, coolers and lawn chairs will be welcome at Liberty Fest but amplified music, illegal drugs, laser pointers, weapons and fireworks or other explosives are among items that are prohibited.

"Safety is our number one priority," Neu said.

Leander police officer's artwork developing international reputation

By RICHARD LEGGITT
Hill Country News

Leander's assistant chief of police may be an officer of the law, but off-duty, he's a renowned graphic artist.

Jeffery Hayes, a primarily self-taught graphic artist, has developed an international reputation for his creative designs for posters, book covers and logos. He is also a popular assistant chief of police in Leander.

"I became a police officer because I want to help people. It is a rewarding job in an ever changing environment, nothing is ever the same," said Hayes, who is in his fifth year as a Leander policeman. Prior to that he was with the Cedar Park Police Department for 18 years.

Raised in Austin, Hayes has another off-duty vocation that is earning him a widespread positive reputation. In his spare time at home, he creates unique designs that are used by governments, businesses, publishing companies and others across the country and even in Europe.

"I picked up art when I was very young," Hayes said. "I started working for a board gaming company. Then I was a cashier at HEB and did a few designs for them. They liked my work, so they took me off the cash register and had me doing designs full time."

Jeffery Hayes designed the 40th anniversary Leander police badge that will be worn by officers starting in January 2018.

After becoming a police officer, Hayes continued developing his artistic skills.

"I attended some classes at the Gemini School of Visual Arts in Cedar Park that taught me digital painting skills that changed the way I do things," he said. "Gemini is an incredible school with outstanding students that have been placed with Disney, Blizzard Entertainment and a number of well-known companies."

Hayes has designed over 100 shoulder patches for various government agencies and departments including the Leander Police Department.

"I also do a lot of book covers, paintings, posters and packaging for commercial projects," Hayes said. "I am doing some work for overseas clients now, including a client in the United Kingdom."

As a Leander police officer, Hayes focuses much of his problem solving skills on projects and planning for the department.

"Chief Minton and I complement each other and we work well together," Hayes said. "Whether I am at the police department or working at home after hours, I definitely keep busy."

The creative work helps Hayes stay creative to the astute problem solving skills required in police work.

"I have found over the years that I have gotten an appreciation for what I do because it is so unique," Hayes said. "The creative side of me helps me with problem solving and that helps me as a police officer. If you have a talent or a skill, you bring it to whatever you are doing."

LET FREEDOM RING

YOUR COMPLETE GUIDE TO THE BEST FOURTH OF JULY IN CENTRAL TEXAS

FIRE UP THE GRILL

Could any food be as simplistic and delicious at the same time as a patty of beef on top of a crusty bun, served with lettuce, tomato and your choice of condiments? A juicy burger can satisfy so many cravings in one sitting.

If ever there was a recipe to master, it would be grilling the perfect burger. Though barbecued burgers may seem easy to make, all too often burgers are botched by a few mistakes. But don't worry, burger mastery is within reach if you follow these simple tips:

- BEGIN WITH FRESH MEAT. Freshly ground meat will produce the best flavor. If you are unsure when the packaged ground beef was made, ask the butcher or someone in the meat department of the supermarket to grind you up a fresh batch. Otherwise, use a food processor or an attachment on a stand mixer to grind the meat yourself.
- FAT HAS FLAVOR. If you're going to indulge in a burger, make sure it has a fair amount of fat content. Fat helps keep the burgers moist and juicy. Make sure the fat content is about 18 to 20 percent of the mix. This helps to guarantee flavorful burgers.
- KEEP THE MEAT COLD. Chilled burger patties will firm up and hold their shape better during cooking. Leave the pre-made patties in the refrigerator until the last minute. Keep patties on ice if you will be cooking burgers in batches.

- DON'T OVERHANDLE THE MEAT. Compressing the meat and handling it too much can lead to dry, dense burgers. Avoid tough meat by handling it as little as possible. Keep your hands wet while shaping the patties so they'll come together easily.
- OIL UP THE GRILL. A clean, well-oiled grill prevents burgers from sticking during cooking.
- MAKE SURE THE GRILL IS SUPER-HOT. The goal is to cook burgers over high heat and fast. This is achieved with a very hot grill. It may only take three to five minutes per side to cook the burgers, depending on the thickness of the patty.
- FLIP ONLY ONCE. Wait until the burgers have been grilling for a few minutes and release easily from the grill grate. Flip them over and allow them to cook a few minutes more. This helps keep the juices inside the meat and prevents your burgers from turning into burnt hockey pucks.

- RESIST THE URGE TO SQUASH THE BURGERS. Pushing down on the burgers with the spatula will only force the juices out. If you want dry burgers, press them down. If you want nice, juicy burgers, step away from the spatula.
- ALLOW THE BURGERS TO REST. Take the burgers off the grill and let them rest for 5 minutes so that all of their juice redistributes through the patty. Toast your hamburger buns and then serve the burgers with your favorite toppings.

Dig in and enjoy your efforts, as well as the compliments.

Ninety minutes is a long time

JODY FULLER
SOUTHERN COLUMNIST

Last week, I spoke at an educational conference in Mississippi for 90 minutes.

For a stuttering guy, that's only about 45 minutes' worth of material but still a long time, nonetheless. It's a whole episode of Saturday Night Live. It's an episode and a half of 60 Minutes. It's how long it takes Lucy to figure out what she wants to order at a drive-thru window. Like I said, it's a long time.

Now, it's one thing to just get up there and run your pie hole for 90 minutes, but it's something else to hold the audience's attention for the duration. I've been slotted for 90 minutes on a handful of occasions but for a variety of reasons never had to go the full allotted time. I'm usually just fine with that and thought this was going to be the case for this event.

I was booked for the conference based on the recommendation of a representative from the Mississippi Department of Education who'd seen me speak earlier in the year at the Mississippi Association of School Superintendents' winter conference. There must be lots of Baptists in The Magnolia State, because at both events, the attendees congregated near the back of the venue. Perhaps I need to start taking a retired Sergeant Major on the road with me to move everyone up front before I start each talk. Veterans know what I mean.

Performing comedy and speaking is much easier for me when I can almost reach out and touch the folks on the front row. I don't like having that gap. I need to connect with my audience. The venue was a small auditorium inside the Jackson Hilton. It was really nice, but there was no one on the first row. The second row, however, was comprised of three ladies sitting side by side. They were awesome! Once I told that first joke, I knew I had them and everyone else for that matter.

I could've talked for three hours. It really wasn't a speech or a comedy performance; it was a talk. I let them know my story and how much I appreciated educators and how much educators have meant to me in my life. I cut up with them, and they returned the favor. It was just an overall good time and a great way to kick off the day. They even booked me on the spot for their Arkansas chapter's conference next year, so I reckon I did a pretty good job.

Mississippi has been very good to me the past few years. I'm booked for the Mississippi Sheriff's Association's conference in December, just three days after the expected due date of our little girl. I'll be sleeping at a very nice hotel away from the baby. I know I'll miss her, but at least I should be able to get more than 90 minutes of uninterrupted sleep. Ninety minutes is a long time.

First Gulf storm of season elbows Texas

ED STERLING
STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

AUSTIN — State emergency responders geared up for the first time this hurricane season in response to Tropical Storm Cindy, which came ashore just east of the Texas-Louisiana border on June 22.

Two deaths were attributed to the storm — one of them an elderly man found in a sand-mired pickup truck on Texas' Bolivar Peninsula.

The storm dropped most of its rainfall east of its center — up to 18 inches in some places far to the east — and much less in Texas. But as a precaution two days before landfall, Gov. Greg Abbott ordered an increase in readiness from level four, normal conditions, to level three, increased readiness.

Four Texas Task Force 1 boat squads were activated, along with two Texas Military Department vehicle squads. Also, the Texas Department of State Health Services Emergency Medical Task Force, the Texas Military Forces Aircraft and shelter and feeding teams were placed on standby.

Abbott noted that weather conditions related to tropical storms can change rapidly without warning, causing catastrophic flooding. "That is why I am imploring all Texans in the Gulf region to stay updated and heed warnings from your local officials, avoid high water areas and refrain from attempting to drive through roadways or over bridges that have the potential to flood."

Paxton leads coalition

Texas Attorney General Ken Paxton on June 19 urged the Federal Communications Commission to deny a petition by the broadband industry to prevent states from investigating and settling claims over false and misleading advertising about broadband Internet speed.

"As the U.S. Supreme Court ruled," Paxton said, "a federal agency may pre-empt state law only when and if it's acting within the scope of its congressionally delegated authority. Hundreds of millions of Americans rely on broadband Internet services every day, yet they don't always get what they pay for. The states' consumer protection powers must be left intact to protect customers from providers who make false claims about broadband speed."

Paxton was joined in the letter by the attorneys general of Arkansas, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Hawaii, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Mississippi, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Tennessee, Vermont, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

Texas adds jobs in May

The Lone Star State's economy expanded in May with the addition of 14,800 seasonally adjusted non-farm jobs, the Texas Workforce Commission announced.

Texas' seasonally adjusted unemployment rate fell to 4.8 percent, down from 5.0 percent in April.

"Texas employers created 266,600 jobs over the past year and the Texas economy continues to provide competitive advantages to large and small business owners across the state," said Andres Alcantar, chair of the Texas Workforce Commission. "TWC remains committed to fostering innovative partnerships that equip Texas students and workers with in-demand skills," he added.

The mining and logging category recorded the largest private-industry gain over the month, with 6,600 jobs added. Construction employment grew by 3,400 jobs in May and financial activities employment expanded by 3,200 jobs.

Furthermore, the Amarillo Metropolitan Statistical Area recorded the month's lowest unemployment rate in the state, with a non-seasonally adjusted rate of 3.1 percent.

AG praises end to bag tax

Attorney General Paxton on June 21 praised the city of Kermit for repealing a local sales tax on single-use plastic bags.

"Cities and municipalities in Texas are obligated to follow the rule of law, and the Legislature passed a law that clearly prohibits a sales tax on bags," Paxton wrote. That law, Paxton said, is Health and Safety Code Sec. 361.0961(a) (3), which states: "A local government or other political subdivision may not adopt an ordinance, rule or regulation to assess a fee or deposit on the sale or use of a container or package."

In May, Paxton's office gave the city of Kermit 60 days to repeal its bag tax. With the city's action, there are no more bag taxes remaining in Texas, Paxton said.

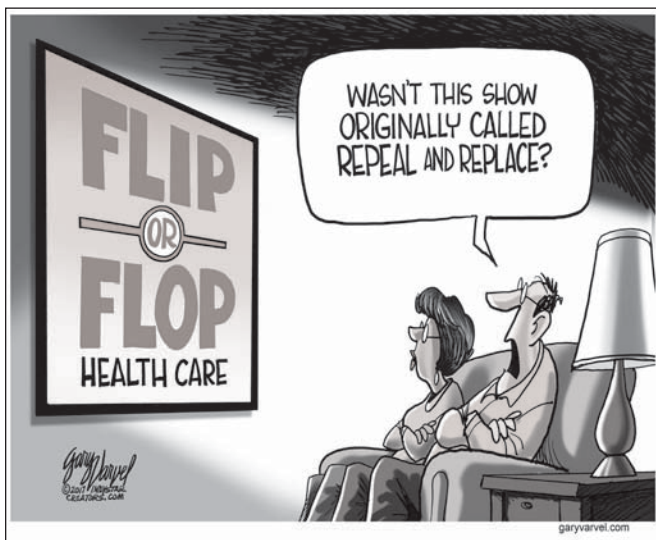

Tips for Zika-free holiday

The Texas Department of State Health Services posted precautions in advance of Independence Day festivities.

"Don't let Zika stop your July 4 plans," the agency said, and offered everyday ways to avoid mosquito bites, which are known to transmit the Zika and West Nile viruses.

Texans, especially pregnant women, should continue to protect themselves from Zika by:

- Applying EPA-approved insect repellent;
- Wearing pants and long-sleeve shirts;
- Using screens or closing windows and doors;
- Removing standing water in and around dwellings;
- Covering trash cans or containers where water can collect; and

Cedar Park Chamber of Commerce Wins Big at Texas Chamber of Commerce Executives Annual Excellence Awards Receives State-Wide Top Honors for "Seeding Growth" Rebranding Campaign

Lyndee Matthews
 Vice President

Last week there was a mass gathering of local chambers from across the state of Texas for the Texas Chamber of Commerce Executives (TCCE) Annual Excellence Awards. I am excited to announce that the Cedar Park Chamber of Commerce received First Place in the State of Texas for its "Seeding Growth" Rebranding Campaign.

As an extremely small staff, we all work very hard on our events and campaigns. To have that hard work recognized state-wide is a great honor and we are very excited to have won.

In January 2016 our staff, guided by Wright Creative Group and a focus group of 15 local business representatives, began the process of rebranding the Chamber. We wanted to get away from our outdated logo and go with something more modern that reflects our current mission and our position within the City of Cedar Park.

Guided by Wright Creative Group, our focus group developed a new theme and logo based upon the tagline "Connection, Collaboration, and Community." The logo that was developed uses Cedar Park colors and is a seed that represents how the Chamber brings together local businesses to plant "seeds of the future."

We are proud to say that our new logo represents local business growth. And from that business growth comes community growth which makes Cedar Park a great place to "Live, Work and Play."

PASTOR MARK BROWN
FAITH COLUMNIST

Children are an inheritance from the Lord. Parents reserve the right to determine what type of education benefits their children. The debate of the government providing financial assistance to parents who pursue alternative options is a heated one. One side claims public schools should not face further defunding. The other side promotes school choice protects parents' religious freedoms or if a non-religious alternative is present, it provides equal educational opportunities regardless of socio-economic status.

Both sides have reasonable arguments. If there is one constant in the midst, children are the next generation. Investing in their future is critical. Preparing them during K-12, college and beyond is creating their platform for impact. We are all charged with doing our creative best in life. Tax dollars are designed to fund education not religious organizations. However, one's religious beliefs are not a reason to withhold funding. It's important to not lose sight of education nor to have an ecological fallacy; assuming all school choice programs are religious based. For example, school choice for special needs is a special session agenda item for our Texas legislature as they embark on a 30 day special session beginning July 18, 2017.

I encourage you to research each side thoroughly. Consider educational outcomes as you evaluate what is best for your children and make your voice known to your legislature. They represent you, vote! School choice consist of traditional public schools, charter schools, vouchers for private schools and or homeschooling. Not all of the aforementioned are religious based. The right thing to do is make sure children have a good education.

As a parent, you are accountable to God for raising, shaping and preparing your children for the future. Pray about how to do that. Your family is welcomed at Faith City Church where you can establish a good biblical foundation or grow in an existing one. Marriages are healed, relationships are restored, next level breakthrough is experienced and community is a priority. You were born for greatness and God wants His best to manifest through your life. You are loved, appreciated, and called to win.

FAITH MAKES US STRONG

Are school choice programs fair to taxpayers since they support private religious schools that may discriminate against taxpayer beliefs?

FATHER WILCOXSON
FAITH COLUMNIST

For today's Round Table, Nick the Editor wants us to answer this question: "Are school choice programs fair to taxpayers since they support private religious schools that may discriminate against taxpayer beliefs?"

The topic is often framed that way, but let's flesh out some details so we can clearly see everything is at stake. Let's say that Marjorie is an engineer who works for a state agency, and she is a fierce advocate for all things scientific. She has a dog named Carl and a cat named Sagan, and she also has a son who is enrolled in a private school that specializes in preparing students for top-ranked universities and for STEM careers. The tuition for the school is pretty steep, and the morning drop-off and afternoon pick-up adds an hour to her commute, but she feels that it's more than worth it. However, what irritates Marjorie to no end is when politicians talk about using her tax dollars to support private schools that teach creationism. After all, why should she be required to fund something that goes against everything she believes?

But, if we're going to get the true and full picture, then we also need to come to grips with the fact that this is precisely the sort of thing that has been happening to religious conservatives for the past several decades. Through their taxes, they have been expected to underwrite public school activities that often contradict their beliefs.

So let's say that Magdalena is a cashier at a big box store; she is also a traditional Roman Catholic. She attends the Latin Mass at least once a month, and, before she got married, she thought seriously about becoming a nun. One day, Magdalena gets an email from her daughter's public school announcing that all students will be participating in an event that is designed to educate young people about the value of sexual diversity. Magdalena prefers that her daughter receive that kind of instruction at home or in her parish; however, when she speaks to her daughter's teacher and with the school's principal, she is told that the event is mandatory and that opting out is an expression of bigotry.

That sort of thing happens all the time. Nevertheless, the folks who mold our culture and moderate our conversations worry a whole lot more about Marjorie than they do about Magdalena—and that's reflected in the way this Round Table question is framed. Of course, the big irony is that while we're discussing whether it's fair to use Marjorie's tax dollars to subsidize the teaching of creationism, no one is suggesting that her son should be forced to study Intelligent Design. However, not only are Magdalena's taxes being used to finance the promotion of sexual diversity, her daughter is also being required to learn about that particular perspective.

The simple reality is that, when it comes to discriminating against tax payer beliefs, public schools do that way more often—and, at times, much more blatantly—than private schools. But there is also a further level of discrimination at work in these sorts of situations.

Because while Magdalena has often explored the possibility of enrolling her daughter in private school, she just can't swing the cost. A voucher or a tax credit scholarship wouldn't cover the tuition entirely, but those programs would make it manageable. However, Magdalena does not live in one of the fourteen states that have voucher programs or in one of the seven states that have tax credit scholarships. So, because Magdalena lives in a particular school district within a particular state, and because home schooling just really isn't an option for her family, she has no choices when it comes to her daughter's education; her daughter has to attend the local public school.

Of course, Marjorie also lives in a specific school district, but her son does not have to attend those schools because she makes more money than Magdalena. Now Marjorie isn't wealthy—in fact, she makes all kinds of sacrifices in order to keep her son in that private school. Nevertheless, her income gives her choices that Magdalena and her daughter will never have.

Which brings us back around to the issue of taxes: In America, we pool our money together, and we use that money to uphold and protect and enhance the quality of our national life. That big pool of money is called taxes. And, yeah, we often gripe about how much we have to contribute to that pool, and we are often appalled at how the money actually gets spent. But, surely, we should all be able to agree that one of the best investments we can make with that money is to guarantee that everyone in the country has access to the kind of education they desire.

But it's that last phrase—"the kind of education they desire"—that's the real kicker. Because when it comes to education, the folks who mold our culture and moderate our conversations just don't trust people to make good choices for their children. And they especially don't trust people like Magdalena, people who are religious conservatives.

I mean, who are we kidding? There are undoubtedly a lot of lower income folks out there who are not at all conservative and are not in any way religious, and they would like to send their children to a secular private school. However, progressive politicians and professional educators and elite media types consistently oppose school choice programs even for those people. Because if we use our tax dollars to support secular private schools, then we will also have to use our tax dollars to fund private religious schools—and, for the folks in the upper School choice, school funding formulas, vouchers, charter schools, Rob-in Hood. Any discussion about the merits of public versus private education and how they're funded is sure to generate raised voices. I'm just a pastor of a small church in the Cedar Park and Leander area. I do not claim to know anything about such a complicated and controversial subject.

However, the editor requires that I share a few thoughts for this Roundtable. So, here goes. The editor posed the question with a couple of loaded words. "Are school choice programs fair to taxpayers since they support private religious schools that may discriminate against taxpayer beliefs?"

Note that the editor's question doesn't identify what kind of religious school. Therefore, I'm assuming he means Christian, Jewish, Muslim, and any other religious school. My example below, though, just addresses those of us with a Christian worldview.

Let's turn that question back with different phrasing. "Is it fair that taxpayers must fund schools that teach things that are diametrically opposed - discriminate against - to what they believe as a Christian?" I'm thinking specifically about the large city school districts like Austin, Dallas, and Houston. When I look at the subjects they teach and the causes they support, I cringe. They clearly discriminate against the beliefs of taxpayers who have a Biblical worldview.

If your answer to the editor's question is "no," then your answer to my hypothetical question must also be "no." You cannot say "no" to the first and "yes" to the second. Otherwise, you're a hypocrite.

The fact is, Christians support schools with their tax dollars, schools which teach things that are opposed to Biblical teachings. So, what's wrong with allowing students and their parents to have a choice in how those tax dollars are spent on their education?

It's full speed ahead for 'Baby Driver'

By SCOTT W. COLEMAN
Hill Country News

Every now and then a movie comes along that defies description by typical genre standards.

"Baby Driver" is one such movie, aggressively racing in its own direction while blasting through any attempt to describe 'exactly' what type of film it is.

Ansel Elgort, an up-and-coming actor whose star is on the rise following turns in the "Divergent" series and "The Fault in Our Stars," both opposite Shailene Woodley.

Taking the lead in "Baby Driver" required Elgort to step up his game, sharing screen time with Oscar winners Kevin Spacey and Jamie Foxx, and Elgort rises to the occasion, playing the role of a young getaway driver in Doc's (Spacey) crime organization.

Baby — yes, that's his name, as he keeps having to say — is a reluctant member of Doc's crew and wants out. But, in criminal organizations, things like getting out don't come easily.

"One more job and I'm done," Baby tells Doc early in the film.

"One more job and we're straight," Doc replies. "Now I don't think I need to give you the speech about what would happen if you say no.

How I could break your legs and kill everyone you love, because you already know that, don't you?"

That's the point where writer/director Edgar Wright — who wrote and directed cult classics like "Scott Pilgrim vs. the World" and "Shaun of the Dead" — could have taken the easy route. Lots of car chases, a few quips about Baby's name, and a sentimental ending, and the film would have looked just like a dozen others coming out this year.

But Wright decided to take the film boldly into avant-garde territory, using a rousing soundtrack (which features inventively into the plot) to drive the ahead and then abruptly change gears from action to comedy, and from heavy drama to romance. Featuring a wide variety of music from the Beach Boys to Beck and the Commodores, Wright is able to deftly keep the story moving ahead without being dragged down by some of the script's darker or more emotionally heavy moments.

Baby's romantic interest, Debora — one character that could have used a bit more development — is nevertheless played well by actress Lily James ("Downton Abbey"). Jamie Foxx and Jon Hamm make the most of their

'Book of Henry' cast is engaging, but not much else

By LAURIE COKER
HCN Film Critic

Certainly, there are methods for stretching the truth and still creating a story that is at its core believable and engaging. The Book of Henry engages, but more because of its cast than its tale. Director Colin Trevorrow and writer Gregg Hurwitz play on every emotion possible but go far beyond the simple story of a unique and contemporary family. Heart-wrenching at times and seriously implausible at others, The Book of Henry harbors some quality themes — wrapped up in a stock fairytale of sorts — and its players make the film worth a look.

Eleven-year-old Henry Carpenter, played beautifully by Jaeden Lieberher, is a boy beyond exceptional, who lives with his waitress mother, Susan (Naomi Watts) and his precious little brother, Peter (Jacob Tremblay). Precocious Henry invents, does his family's finances, invests in the stock market and moons over his pretty next-door neighbor who has a dark secret. Equally menacing, however, is the tumor settled inside Henry's head. Once the youngster realizes his days are numbered, he creates a plan to save the girl and set his family up for life after Henry — including financial and emotional stability.

Credit needs to be given to Trevorrow for fashioning a pretty film filled with rich characters and beautiful imagery, even if Hurwitz's story plays on the absurd and rudimentary. Lieberher makes Henry believable and sympathetic and Watts plays beautifully beside him.

Little Tremblay is adorable beyond words — perhaps too much so, but the family relationship pleases. Comedian Sarah Silverman, as a plucky, boozing waitress and friend offers some oddly placed comedic relief and Lee Pace steps up as the film's Knight as Henry's extraordinarily compassionate neurosurgeon. They make the film magical even if the story pushes boundaries.

There are two plots in The Book of Henry — one within his head and home and the other plays out with the creepy neighbor, Glenn Sicklman (Dean Norris) and his stepdaughter, Christina (Maddie Zeigler) — neither is particularly fresh. The film is a bit of an anomaly — one that borders on special and somehow manages to go too far and stay too simple. As a result, I can recommend the film and offer up a C+/B-grade, but I know it won't please everyone.

Third time's the charm

Former Longhorn Drew Stubbs returns to Rangers organization for third time

By ZACH SMITH
Sports Editor

Drew Stubbs has come home. The national championship winner with the University of Texas and nine-year MLB veteran has spent nine seasons in the major leagues but joined the Texas organization as a free agent for the third time in his career in mid-May.

"I'm able to make the 25-minute commute up here and there's really nothing like that," he said. "Everybody here is trying to get to the big leagues for the first time or in my case, get back there. Hopefully, the stay isn't all too long, but given the circumstances, while I'll be here, it's better than being anywhere else."

His first stint in Texas was in 2015 after being released by the Colorado Rockies, where he appeared in seven Round Rock games before spending most of September in the majors. Stubbs donned the Express uniform for 12 games last year on a rehab assignment while his sprained left toe healed.

This season, he's spent time with the Minnesota Twins and San Francisco Giants, the seventh and eighth different organizations he's spent time with since getting drafted in 2006.

"Everybody's kind of got the way they do things and handle player personnel," he said of the differences in organizations. "I've been fortunate to not have had experiences. There have been things I like more than others, but I can't complain."

Since joining the Express this season, he's been a key part of the offense, boasting a .299 average with six home runs and 24 RBIs. Defensively, the center fielder has just one error in 44 appearances.

"He's been here and he's been up in the majors and he's done a good job," Express manager Jason Wood said. "They haven't always wanted to get rid of him, it just happened to be a transitional type deal or a roster move so they move what he can do. They can call him up and he can fit in right now because they know he can do."

Stubbs was a first round pick in 2006 and spent the first six seasons of his career with the Cincinnati Reds. He spent 2013 with the Cleveland Indians and 2014 and most of 2015 with the Colorado Rockies.

For his career, he's batting .242 in the major leagues with 92 home runs and 283 RBIs in 911 appearances. His minor league numbers are even more impressive, holding a .269 average, 38 dingers and 219 RBIs.

For Stubbs, it doesn't matter where he was drafted. The teams might have given him more of a look early on based on his pick, but after a few years in the system, all of the draft picks tend to even out.

"Once the draft is over, you're one of 50 guys drafted by your team," Stubbs said. "When it comes to draft picks, you're a success if you just make it to the big leagues. If you can stick around for a while, you've been a good investment for your team."

At 32 years old, he still believes he has plenty to offer a major league team. And whether that's Texas or some other squad, he hopes to be back in the big leagues sooner than later.

"I was just looking to get at-bats in Triple-A and I knew the organization and staff," Stubbs said. "I have an out every two weeks where if any other team has a need, I can take the spot. So I'm essentially playing for 29 other teams too. But hopefully, stuff works out where I can go up to the Rangers."

UIL proposes shift to Class 5A, relaxes television blackout

By ZACH SMITH
Sports Editor

The UIL announced last week that it would split Class 5A football districts into separate divisions before the season started.

Based on enrollment, all 5A schools will be separated into Division I and Division II before the 2018 season starts and the districts will be formed based upon those numbers. In LISD, Cedar Park with an enrollment of more than 2000, will be in Division I while Rouse will most likely join them.

"It's kind of new territory for everyone," Rouse head coach Josh Mann said. "If you're in the Division II schools you like it. For the smaller schools, it balances out and creates separation so you don't have to wait until playoffs."

The biggest question yet to be answered with the realignment is travel and whether or not the further separation of 5A schools will create longer, previously avoidable, trips for district football games. Schools in lower classifications have had this rule in place for some time, but schools of that size already have to travel a long distance for athletics.

"It's a good idea," Cedar Park head coach Carl Abseck said. "It levels the playing field for some of the schools that have smaller enrollments. We kind of knew what we were going to be, but now we'll know for sure. The interesting part will be which way we go when they split it. We could be in Region 4 or Region 3 and I really don't have any idea where we'll end up."

The current 5A classification consists of schools with an enrollment between 1,100 and 2,149. If those numbers stay the same, Division I would be schools with enrollment between 1,742 and 2,149 and Division II of 1,100 to 1,741.

Glenn is the wildcard in LISD. The Grizzlies are projected to be above the 1,100 student threshold for 5A status when the districts realign before the 2018 season, but if they are in 5A Division II, LISD would have schools in 6A, 5A Division I and 5A Division II.

Mann said Rouse should have an enrollment in the mid-1800s next season, putting them in the range for Division I status. But in the year when the realignment starts, the last seniors class will be going to Glenn and he expects the enrollment to drop to the 1600 range.

"We're kind of a pickle," Mann said. "This last realignment, we were projected to have an enrollment over 2,000,

Cedar Park native wins Great Texas 300

By ZACH SMITH
Sports Editor

Mike Rohrer chose to spend his Father's Day weekend out on the open seas.

Rohrer, who has lived in Cedar Park with his wife Laurinda for 25 years, traveled to South Padre Island to begin the 15th running of the Great Texas 300, a five-day, four-stage, 300-mile catamaran boat race from South Padre Island to Galveston.

"One of the things about this race is you find out things you never knew you could do because you don't have a choice most of the time," Rohrer said. "It's a pretty significant sailing feat just to finish a leg. Sometimes the directions of the wind play a factor, but you still have to sail it."

Rohrer and his crew Chris Holt, of Austin, won the GT300 with a time of 18 hours, 40 minutes and nine seconds, beating the second-place finisher by nearly four hours. Rohrer previously won the race in 2004 and finished second in 2009, when he lost by just 15 seconds.

The duo won the first leg on Wednesday by more than four hours due to mechanical difficulties by the other four boats in the race. They also finished first in Leg 2, finishing 18 minutes before the second place catamaran.

Friday was the only day they had trouble, finishing 21 minutes behind the Leg 3 winning duo of Lee Wicklund and David Cerdas, and three minutes back of second place. Still, the lead they had built up was enough for them to hold on, thanks to winning Saturday's Leg 4 by two minutes.

"It was the third fastest time in the years we've been recording it," he said. "I had a four-hour lead after the first day, and as long as I didn't have some big issue, I was going to win. We just had to make sure we didn't take any big risks."

Weather played a factor this year. One boat didn't even begin the race because of the rough seas, while another had trouble on the first day with a damaged rudder. The boat launched to start the race but was forced to head to the beach where it was repaired with Gorilla Tape before re-entering the competition.

When the winds are less and the sun is shining, many times the race is longer, slower, and much less grueling. But when the winds are howling and waves are big, the race can go quickly but be brutal.

"You don't know what's going to happen sometimes," Rohrer said. "The weather sets the stage. It can be a beautiful sail, or it can be hellacious depending on the weather conditions. There are nerves when you leave. You pretty much know if you go to the beach, you have to help yourself out because it's going to be hard for somebody to get to you."

Catamaran racing was most popular in the 1970s and 1980s and was brought to prominence thanks in part to the Worrell 1000, a 1,000-mile race beginning in South Beach, Florida and ending in Virginia Beach, Virginia.

Rohrer, the treasurer of the Great Texas Fleet, said the future of the race is still up in the air. With the decrease in numbers, making the race a yearly occurrence might prove difficult as they may shift to holding a GT300 every other year.

but we haven't been over 2,000 in two years."

Schools also have the option to move up to Division I even if they have Division II numbers, creating yet another wrinkle in the inevitably complicated discussions to come and effectively defeating the purpose of the split.

While the 5A split drew the most headlines from the meeting, it wasn't the only proposal the superintendents passed.

The UIL said it will enforce stricter policies regarding fighting on the football field, citing 16 acts of violence reported to the board last season. And of the six new sports brought to the attention of the UIL, only water polo will be monitored for consideration in the future.

Friday night football games have not been allowed to be broadcast live on television, but that might be changing. The board passed a motion to televise one game a year on Sept. 1 on Fox

Sports Southwest.

Abseck said televising the playoffs and the state championship games are fine, and having one special regular season game on TV is something he could get behind. But regular Friday night television coverage is not something he'd like to see.

"There is so much that goes on with the games that TV wouldn't cover and I would hate that people would stay home," he said. "You've got the band and the cheerleaders and the TV can't really cover all that. If you're there you get to see the whole deal.

"That's what makes the atmosphere so much fun and makes Friday night football, Friday night football."

HOMEMADE ICE CREAM MAKES FOR THE PERFECT SUMMER TREAT

Ice cream is synonymous with summer, when rising temperatures and Independence Day call for some refreshing celebration. Those who want to experiment with homemade ice cream may want to consider the following recipe for “Dulce de Leche Ice Cream” from Lou Seibert Pappas’ “Ice Creams and Sorbets” (Chronicle Books).

DULCE DE LECHE ICE CREAM

Makes about 1 quart

Ingredients
 2 cups half-and-half or milk
 4 large egg yolks
 1/2 cup sugar
 12 ounces butterscotch chips, divided
 1 cup heavy whipping cream
 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

- Prepare a large bowl or pan of ice water.
- In the top of a double boiler, heat the half-and-half over simmering water until steaming. In a bowl, whisk the egg yolks until blended, then whisk in the sugar. Whisk in about half of the hot half-and-half and pour the yolk mixture into the pan of half-and-half. Stir with a silicone spatula or spoon and cook over simmering water for about 8 minutes. Stir in 1 cup of the chips and continue stirring until blended in and the custard coats the back of the spatula, about 2 minutes more. Immediately place the custard pan in the ice bath and stir the custard occasionally until it cools to room temperature. Transfer to a container and stir in the cream and vanilla. Cover and refrigerate until thoroughly chilled, about 3 hours.

- Freeze in an ice cream maker according to the manufacturer’s instructions. When the ice cream is almost frozen, add the remaining 1 cup chips and churn until blended in, about 15 seconds more. Transfer to a container, cover and freeze until firm, about 2 hours.

COLEMAN, from pg. 7

screen time as fellow bad guys Bats and Buddy, with Hamm delivering a particularly impressive performance.

Jon Bernthal (“The Walking Dead”), Eliza Gonzalez (television’s “From Dusk Till Dawn” series), and Flea of the Red Hot Chili Peppers round out the notable cast, though “Lost” actor Lanny Joon has a short but memorable appearance.

In the end, “Baby Driver” is a wonder of modern filmmaking: a film that is at once an action-adventure, romantic comedy, drama, crime story, escapist fantasy that is at the same time really neither of those.

It’s the kind of film one has to experience to truly understand. Since it’s playing in area theaters starting June 27, you can do just that.

Ansel Elgort and Kevin Spacey star in “Baby Driver.”

Stay safe and productive

DAN TROXELL
LISD SUPERINTENDENT

With a few weeks of summer already checked off the calendar, I wanted to take a moment to discuss a few items that will help our students and families stay safe and productive this summer. While this break can be a much-needed time to relax, spend quality time with friends and make new family memories, it also holds a greater potential for harmful activities and risky behavior.

Despite academic gains during the school year, students who lack access to learning opportunities over the summer fall behind, disproportionately among students from lower-income households, and the loss is cumulative year-to-year. Summer learning loss is most pronounced in the areas of reading, spelling and math, with some disadvantaged students returning to school in the fall roughly 2.6 months behind in math.

Parents and guardians serve as our children's first and most important teachers, and as such, LISD encourages them to seek out opportunities to practice reading, spelling and math in everyday activities. Find a recipe to make with your kids to practice reading aloud and converting fractions. Watch baseball and calculate batting averages or add the number of errors. Work on spelling "popsicle" or "solstice" while enjoying a summer drive.

Libraries host free activities and access to books. We have summer hours at Steiner Ranch Elementary School and Rouse High School (click Summer Information at leanderisd.org). City libraries offer programing for all ages. Families can access books in our digital library from their homes with the Overdrive website or mobile application.

In the same way reading can spark a child's imagination and fuel curiosity, building some time into each day for unstructured play is an important tool in allowing children to create and explore. Unstructured play is open-ended, child-led play without a particular goal or strategy — things like building forts, playing outside, making their own crafts and building with blocks. Behavioral scientists and educators are seeing increasing evidence that free play is one of the most effective ways for children to learn about independence, self-control, talent development, handling mistakes and emotional growth.

We have seen the power technology can have as a tool for teaching and learning. But building emotional skills through personal interaction can contribute to a well-rounded child. Spend time to find the solution for managing technology time for your family that works best for you.

Time with family and friends needs to be a precious commodity. I know as my son prepares for his freshman year in college while my other son comes home for his summer break from college, I will treasure the time at the breakfast and dinner table. Enjoy your family and talk to your children about the topics of the day, their friends and the things going on in their lives.

We hope you all have a fun, restful, safe and memorable summer. And we are excited to welcome you back Aug. 28 for our best year yet!

Cedar Park reminds water customers to "Think Twice"

Staff Report

With the hot summer weather here, the City of Cedar Park is ramping up its "Think Twice" campaign to remind water customers to follow their twice-per-week designated watering days and times, and to conserve water — reminding them that "A Little Water Goes a Long Way."

Outdoor irrigation accounts for most water usage in Cedar Park during stretches of hot weather. Water production often doubles during long stretches without rain, as evidenced last summer. For example, on a Wednesday and Thursday in mid-August last year, when Cedar Park was experiencing several weeks without rain, water production jumped to 22.53 million gallons and 23.47 million gallons each day. Following significant rainfall water production returned to more normal levels the following Wednesday and Thursday — 11.32 million and 9.5 million gallons, respectively.

Following the designated two-days-per-week watering schedule helps customers evenly distribute water use throughout the area, plus following the designated times helps customers get the most out of their efforts by watering when temperatures are lower thus helping to prevent evaporation.

Customers with an address ending in an odd number are permitted to water with automatic irrigation systems or hose-end sprinklers on Wednesdays and Saturdays; customers with an address ending in an even number may water

Thursdays and Sundays. Businesses may irrigate their commercial property on Tuesdays and Fridays, regardless of address. Irrigation times for residential customers are before 10 a.m. and after 7 p.m.

Hand watering and drip irrigation are allowed any day, any time. The city strongly encourages customers with automatic irrigation systems to inspect their systems frequently: make sure that the days and times are set correctly, check for and repair broken heads and install a system backup battery annually.

The City offers free irrigation system evaluations to homeowners and offers various rebates and freebies throughout the year. For more information visit www.WaterThriftCedarPark.org.

MEET THE CANDIDATES

• Three Democratic challengers — Christine Eady Mann, Mike Clark and Kent Lester — are vying for the 31st District Congressional seat held by Rep. John Rice Carter (R). All have set their sights on winning the March 6, 2018 Democratic primary for the right to oppose Carter in next year's general election.

VETERAN CONSIDERS RUNNING

Mary Jennings Hegar, an Afghanistan veteran and women's equality champion, is considering running for Congress in the 31st District, according to local Democrat leaders.

joined a lawsuit against the U.S. Department of Defense in an effort to eliminate the military's Ground Combat Exclusion Policy, which kept female armed service members from officially serving in combat roles despite their long-standing record of doing so with honor. In the face of the suit and Hegar's outspoken opposition, the Pentagon changed its policy.

Hegar has written about her harrowing Afghanistan rescues and her challenge to the Pentagon's rules about women in combat in a book "Shoot Like a Girl: One Woman's Dramatic Fight in Afghanistan and on the Home Front." TriStar is making the book into a major motion picture and, according to The Hollywood Reporter, Academy Award winner Angelina Jolie is negotiating to play the role of Hegar.

Hegar was not available for comment for this story, but local Democrat leaders said she has been attending some of the Democratic meetings in the district and is clearly looking at the race, although she has not yet made a decision about whether or not to file as a candidate for next year's elections.

The three Democrat candidates in the race said they are undaunted by the possibility that Hegar might bring her star power to the campaign.

"I have heard that she is thinking about it," said Clark. "If she enters it will be another good Democratic voice."

Lester welcomes the challenge of a diverse primary.

"A primary is healthy for us," said Lester. "We went a long time when there was no one running."

Mann was somewhat more circumspect.

"I think it's great to have a choice among candidates in a Democratic primary, as long as the candidates have a track record of supporting Democrats and the principles of the Democratic Party," Mann said.

Whatever the possibility of Hegar's entry into the race, all of the current Democrat candidates are united about the opportunity and the importance of unseating the 75-year-old Carter.

"Unfortunately, his office is indifferent to hearing from people who disagree with him," Mann has said.

Clark was the Democrat nominee against Carter in 2016 and was defeated.

"He has been in a long time and gotten little or nothing done in terms of legislation for our community," Clark said of Congressman Carter.

A call to Carter's office seeking his comments on the 2018 race was not returned.

"He is taking us for granted, he doesn't show up," said Lester. "I think that our democratic institutions are under attack and need to be defended. Our future is being taught that the judicial system is rigged. That our election system is rigged. That the media is rigged. That the free press is our enemy. We must stop that false indoctrination."

Brian Cronin, a local democratic activist, said the District 31 primary demonstrates the growth and resurgence of the party.

"We already have three hardworking candidates in the race," Cronin said. "They are all passionate about representing people of Central Texas and going to DC to improve our government. The primary process will only strengthen their campaigns."

Cronin said if Hegar enters the campaign her candidacy would bring additional attention to the race. "It would also mean that we would have another outstanding candidate stepping forward to work for the citizens of Texas, which is always good news, Cronin said.

Plan for development of Brushy Creek intersection is approved

By RICHARD LEGGITT
Hill Country News

The Cedar Park City Council Thursday unanimously approved a plan for the development of 42 acres at the northwest corner of Parmer Lane and Brushy Creek Road, ending a decade-long struggle to find an agreed upon use for the triangle-shaped prime property.

"This plan isn't perfect," said Mayor Matt Powell. "But it is very good. I have been working on this issue longer than any other."

Councilman and Mayor Pro Tem Stephen Thomas said it has been a challenging project because of the topography.

"It's been hard to find a better solution," he said.

The owners of the property, Ann and Gary Seaman, have been seeking an appropriate use of the oddly shaped parcel of land adjoining two major roads for more than 12 years. The plan approved last week calls for construction of 140 single family units in a gated community along Parmer Road and the development of retail space for offices and restaurants near the intersection.

"I am pleased to have such a good use of my old family home," said Ann Seaman. "It has taken a long time. I am here to speak in support of this project and to thank the developer, Millstone. When they were presented with a problem, they solved it. Thank you."

OTHER BUSINESS

Thursday city council also approved an amendment to the Cedar Park fiscal year 2017 capital budget in the amount of $3.4 million for expansions to current fire and police facilities as well as utility projects. A special use permit was also approved to allow the opening of a Camp Bow Wow pet boarding kennel at 1805 Clover Lane.

headline this year's Liberty Fest. In addition, the event will feature food, crafts, fireworks and a special area called "The Fun Zone" where, for a $10 all-day ticket, fest patrons can play around with a bounce house, slides and other inflatable activities, as well as laser tag and a soccer kick.

Gates open at 4:30 p.m. at the event's location near the Austin Community College campus. Fireworks will begin around 9 p.m. There will be partial road closures along Mel Mathis Blvd. during the festival, and the Capital Metro Leander Station will be closed so it can be used as a launching platform for the fireworks.

use our tax dollars to support secular private schools, then we will also have to use our tax dollars to fund private religious schools—and, for the folks in the upper echelons of our society, that's just not acceptable.

In fact, when you get right down to it, the conflict here isn't actually about religion; it's not even about money; it's about the nature and purpose of education. For religious conservatives, education is about forming a child's character. Because when a child's identity is grounded in truth and beauty and goodness, then that child will become a young person who is thoughtful and humble and kind.

But the folks who mold our culture and moderate our conversations have come to regard education as a means of social engineering—as a way to make sure that everyone thinks approved thoughts and speaks in authorized words and undertakes only acceptable actions. And when you're trying to get everyone to conform to your idea of what society should look like, any deviation from that norm is going to be seen as a threat.

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
